DOJ Public Comment

I am writing to express my opinion regarding the Department of Justice's case against Microsoft. I am firmly opposed to any actions being taken against Microsoft. Any remedy proposed under the guise of the anti-trust laws will amount to fascism, where property is property in name only. Microsoft has a moral right to do as it chooses with its own property and amount of penalization of Microsoft will abrogate that right. The government, by adhering to the dictatorial anti-trust laws, is engaged on a witch-hunt for success. Any company that has achieved success by the voluntary choices of consumers is a potential victim while companies that achieve success by government decree (e.g. US Postal Service) are safe from the clutches of bureaucrats. It is revolting to see that when the American dream finally comes true for someone (Bill Gates), the government and envious competitors insists on creating a nightmare to follow.
